

AAPM Fellowship Excellence Award
Brigham and Women's Hospital (2013): Testimonial

Achieving excellence in pain medicine training requires the cooperation of a multidisciplinary team of dedicated professionals. Receiving the AAPM Pain Medicine Fellowship Excellence Award in 2013 has helped support our center's mission to educate physicians on the most effective and compassionate methods of taking care of patients with acute and chronic pain.

Our program is focused on patient-centered care, education, research, and bringing forward innovative methods to improve the quality of life of patients who suffer from pain. We are pleased that the AAPM shares these goals and values and are honored that we have been chosen as a program of excellence in pain fellowship education.

We recognize that the future of our specialty will be only as good as the doctors and other practitioners who we train. As such, we expect our fellows to not only develop exemplary clinical judgment, but that they put patient needs at the forefront and learn to practice always ethically and correctly. The AAPM Pain Medicine Fellowship Excellence Award has helped validate and confirm our mission and has strengthened our resolve to further improve fellowship education.

Srdjan S. Nedeljkovic, M.D.
Fellowship Director, Pain Medicine
Brigham and Women's Hospital
October 16, 2014